

ABSTRACT

A method of determining the cardiac output of a patient, the method comprising the steps of: (a) measuring the patients height; (b) measuring the velocity time integral or stroke distance of blood flowing from the heart of the patient, (c) utilising the two 5 measurements in step (a) and (b) to determine the cardiac output of the patient.